

Stolen Childhoods

Kip Moon

America's attempt to separate Native children from their families didn't end with boarding schools. In the decades after World War II, the U.S. government created the Indian Adoption Project, an effort designed to place Native kids with white parents.

In this one-hour documentary, producer Melissa Olson explores the personal and historical impact of this policy. Her Ojibwe mother, Judy Olson, was raised by a white family. So were the mothers of several friends. The emotional impact of the Indian Adoption Project - and similar state projects - continues today. Produced by Melissa Olson and Ryan Katz. Edited by Todd Melby, a production of KFAI's MinneCulture.

Total Running Time: 51:00 (no breaks)

Air Window: Evergreen

NV1 Weblink: (audio files, photos)

https://nativeftp.org/nv1specials/Stolen_Childhoods/

Nv1 FTP:

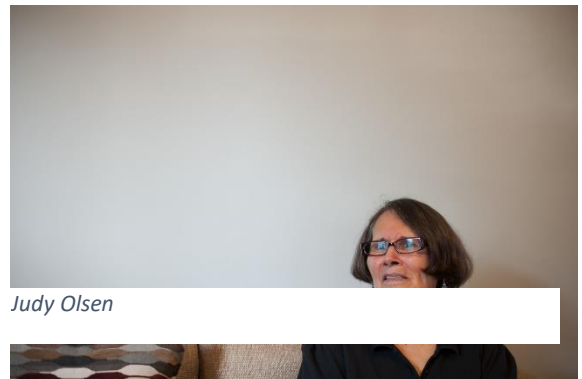

NV1 Program Specials

Host: ftp.nativeftp.org

User: nv1specials@nativeftp.org

Password: Nv1Voice1!

FTP Server Port: 21

Judy Olson

Please let us know your plans to air this program. Request this special here <https://www.nv1.org/program-request/>, or contact Nola Daves Moses nola@nv1.org; 505-401-4532. Thanks!

